ST. LOUIS PIANO MANUFACTURING COMPANY'S

"Bell Treble" Pianos

In their short career of six years, have received in succession

34 FIRST PREMIUMS!

Over all competitors, at various State Fairs, defeating in turn every other maker without a single exception.

The Chicago Times says: This Piano possesses in an eminent degree all those superlative qualities which have given the instruments of some well-known makers a world-wide reputation.

The often doubted question whether the West can produce an instrument equal in quality and price to Eastern makers, is now very decidedly proved in favor of the St. Louis Piano Manufacturing Co.—Chicago Times

Those best qualified to judge, including manufacturers and pianists, have the greatest confidence in its power to do all that a first-class square piano can do.—Chicago Evening Post.

They are real gems in every particular.—N. O. Picayune.

To St. Louis belongs the honor of producing instruments equal at least in every respect to the most famous manufacturers.—Memphis Avalanche.

A great future is certain for this company. Their instruments are ranked above Steck's, Decker's, Weber's, and Chickering & Son's —Westliche Post.

We recommend them to the patronage of our readers as superior instruments.—N. O. Times.

These Pianos are superior to many older makes. Galveston News.

The New Orleans Times very justly says: It has heretofore seemed impossible to make an upright piano in Europe or America that would compare in sonority of tone with the best square pianos. But the best judges who have tested the "Bell Treble" Upright, agree that we have an upright piano not excelled by the finest squares in depth, clearness, brilliancy and richness of tone, in power, elasticity and lightness of touch, in durability and faultlessness in beauty of appearance, combining all the desirable qualities of the Pleyel, the Erard, the Chickering, and the Steinway.

The New Orleans Picayune says: It would be superfluous to attempt to add any weight to the decisive opinion expressed by our best musicians, that, in every particular, the St. Louis "Bell Treble" Upright Pianos are unsurpassed.

The Journal of Commerce says: The "Bell Treble" is sweeping the trade wherever introduced. In short, the "Bell Treble" IS THE PIANO OF THE AGE.

INTRODUCTION.

(1873)
introduction

DO UNTO OTHERS AS THEY DO UNTO YOU. — Golden Rule.

We lay this book before our patrons and the public, with our kindest regards for the interests of the former, expecting the commendation of all, as we have done full all we agreed and more, in the contents of the work, and issued in advance of the date expected, therefore, we can justly look with some pride upon the accomplishment, of a thorough canvass, accurate and convenient compilation, and prompt publication of a first class Railway Business Directory, from St. Louis, Missouri to Galveston, Texas, extending a distance of over 1,000 miles, through as fine a section of country as the day's luminary ever shone upon.

The enterprise and extent of accomplishments of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway, as also the Houston and Texas Central Railway, and the Galveston, Houston and Henderson Railway, are practically and truthfully shown up in this book, by the history and extent of business done in each of the towns on their lines, which the building and operating of these roads have been largely the means of accomplishing and maintaining; and of the active business men of these towns, they are the most enterprising of any in the South or West; each having commenced carefully and pushed their business, with honesty and industry, until now many of them, in the larger towns, are carrying a yearly business that is truly wonderful, and with remarkably few failures.

Southwest Missouri, Southern Kansas, the Indian country, and Texas, each have accomplished much, yet they have a future development to be experienced, the extent of which is not even now dreamed of. Of this style of Directory publishing, we claim to be the pioneers in the United States, having originally published works similar to this in the Eastern and Middle States with good success; as it is the only kind of Directory (aside from City Directories proper) that is feasible, practicable and profitable, alike to patron and publisher, we have again embarked in it as a regular business, and shall hereafter issue this and other routes each bienially, or again in 1875.

To those who have, as strangers, become our patrons as subscribers and advertisers, we most heartily thank you for your liberal patronage, and conscientiously believe your return will be far more profitable than ours; and that you are the persons in your towns respectively, who will in the next two years prosper most; and to those who have hesitatingly, carelessly or wilfully refused us patronage, we trust you will observe the little mistake soon, and in the future reissue of this book, give us a more hearty recognition, which we at all times endeavor to deserve and recompense; and further to our patrons we will say that if at any time, in the future, we can be of any business service, you have but to request it, and we will endeavor to be as kind to you as you have been to us.

To the management of each of these trunk railroads, — except the Missouri Pacific, — we return you our warmest regards for your generous liberality, and trust to be of future service to you.

Remaining we are yours truly,

A. L. LOGAN & CO.,

KIRKWOOD, MO.

This is a town of about 600 inhabitants, situated upon a gently rising bluff, immediately on the line of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, 13 miles from St. Louis. Its natural location to which has been added extensive public and private improvements, combine to make it one of the most desirable residence towns of any within reasonable convenience to St. Louis. It contains several stores of different kinds, Ice Cream and Oyster parlors, Schools, Churches and a good Hotel, and last but not most important, a Female Seminary of several years' existence, well managed, which has become justly popular for high grade, systematic arrangement, healthy buildings, handsome grounds, and great economy of cost, for either partial or complete course in all branches of a first class education, being free from any theological dictation, yet highly moral.

The principal residents are active business men from St. Louis, who selected this town and continue to make it a little paradise of their own, welcoming all additions of enterprising residents.

ROSE HILL, MO.

A minor station, with only a few residents. Handsomely situated, one mile west of Kirkwood and 14 miles west of St. Louis.

BARRETT STATION, MO.

A station of some importance, containing a few enterprising residents. Well surrounded; being 17 miles west of St. Louis.

MERAMEC, MO.

A watering station, well located, being on a small river of the same name, which has an outlook to become more important in a very few years, as a point of manufactures.

ST. PAUL, MO.

A station of more importance than the three last; containing a population of 100 souls; it has two stores, one saw mill, one dairy, one school, one church; it is situated on the north bank of the Meramec River, surrounded by a fine belt of timber adjoining prairie; it is 24 miles west of St. Louis.

An early application is desirable.

Call on or address the Principal,

MISS ANNA C. SNEED,

Kirkwood, St. Louis Co., Mo.

EUREKA, MO.

A station rather among the hills, with some enterprising residents—about 150 in number; this village secured in 1870 a wide reputation by the terrible railroad disaster of that year, caused by the too sudden meeting of the incoming “express” and a heavily-loaded out-bound freight train, resulting in a fearful disaster and destruction of rolling stock, and in the killing and severely wounding of a few people, perhaps a hundred, aside from others who were badly scared, by the trifling loss of a finger, hand, arm or foot.

ALLENTON, MO.

A way station 3 miles each from the notorious “Eureka” and Franklin, and 33 miles from St. Louis; possesses some attractions, with some energetic inhabitants, the latter numbering perhaps 200 souls, including the suburbs.

FRANKLIN, MO.

This is an old town in years, containing formerly the construction and repair shops of the South Pacific Railroad, and is the real eastern terminus of the great 35th parallel railroad; it is 37 miles west of St. Louis, is surrounded on the north by rocky hills with a few good farms in other directions; contains a population of about 1200 souls; is a headquarters for a large number of railroad employees, and is in fact entirely a railroad town. The following are the names of her business men:

Calkins, J. B., Prop. Franklin Hotel and R. R. Eating House, at Depot.

Eheret, Frank, Boot and Shoemaker, St. Louis street.

Gross, George, Bakery and Confectionery, St. Louis.

Huneke, William, General Merchandise, St. Louis.

White, J. W., Lawyer, St. Louis.

Williams, H., Lumber Dealer, St. Louis.

Worthington, J. F., General Merchandise, St. Louis.

GRAY'S SUMMIT, MO.

A station and village 4 miles west of Franklin and 41 miles from St. Louis, on the Missouri Pacific road, situated as its name implies on an elevated location, with some enterprising people and a large proportion of natives, numbering about 350; will some time doubtless become important as a shipping point for building stone, of which there is unlimited abundance.

LABADIE, MO.

A small way station so necessary about every 3 or 4 miles to make up the necessary appearance of a densely settled section of country; the truth of which we take for granted.

AUGUSTA, MO.

Another of the style of the last point, 4 miles west of it and partaking of very much the same peculiarities, except that it possesses a feminine name, and likewise a preponderance of that sex, its entire population possibly numbering 150 souls, natives and all.

SOUTH POINT, MO.

A way station just 4 miles west of the last named, and 8 miles east of Washington (not D. C.) ; has some promising country surrounding it and a few good farms, with a population of about 200 souls all counted.

WASHINGTON, MO.

Washington is a town of considerable importance, situated upon the Pacific R. R. and the Missouri River, 55 miles west of St. Louis, having the advantage of both river navigation and railroad facilities, for shipping merchandise, it is one if not the best built towns on the road, all the buildings being of brick. It has about 3300 inhabitants, and is about 35 years old. It has now in operation and all doing a good business, two flour mills, two pork packing establishments, a tannery, brewery and lumber and planing mill; population mostly German, an honest, industrious and law abiding class of citizens.

Washington Hotel,

Opposite R. R. Depot,

WASHINGTON, MO.

Has lately been taken by the present proprietor, and fitted up in every way as an A No. 1 Hotel; it is a fine brick building, with large airy rooms and first-class accommodations—two large sample rooms for commercial travelers; there is also a splendid bar connected with it, where the choicest wines and liquors are guaranteed. Parties stopping at Washington, if they would consult their own comfort, should by all means put up at this House, where they will receive every attention from the genial and courteous host.

MONITEAU, MO.

An ordinary way station, 156 miles from St. Louis and 31 miles from the State Penitentiary (Capital); has a population of about 100 souls, counting all noses; this town may come out in the future and become important.

TIPTON, MO.

This is an old settled town, having been located long enough to be a city or the tip-of-a-town, neither of which will its present population bring about, but which may be done by generations unborn; its natural location, 163 miles from St. Louis, is good, and the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. has made an effort to help it by building a branch road to Booneville, on the Missouri river, of 25 miles, but all to no great benefit; it has a population of about 1000 souls.

OTTERVILLE, MO.

This town originally derived its name from the fine quality of otter furs secured and shipped from this locality. It is not an old town, but possessed of good natural advantages, and the large majority of its business men are live, industrious, and enterprising, who are far out-reaching their neighbors of Tipton and California. It has a population of 600.

SEDALIA, MO.

This thriving and energetic town is one of the oldest in Central Missouri, 189 miles west of St. Louis, and 93 miles from Kansas City; being originally settled by active and thoroughly enterprising people, from its origin it became a thriving village, soon a town, and now takes on the appearance of a Western City. Its location being on a high, rolling prairie, rich in soil, well cultivated, with water near the surface of a good quality, all naturally unite to stimulate the permanent building up of an economical town and city. The building and completion of the Missouri Pacific Railroad gave it its first permanent importance, but the building of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway (this being its present eastern terminus,) is doing more to increase the importance of the town as a commercial distributing point and manufacturing center than any other. This place now has direct communication by rail south, southwest, west, northwest and northeast, by six distinct railroads extending in as many directions, thereby affording direct, quick and cheap transportation to the merchants and manufacturers, of which there are a goodly number of liberal, enterprising persons, firms and companies, who have the enterprise to compete with St. Louis in some things, and with Kansas City in all goods to their local consumption, as well as to the trade of surrounding towns over an immense scope of thickly settled and prosperous sections of country, not second to any part of the West. The names and nature of business of each of these persons are given below, and more fully in our advertising pages, to which we refer the reader for facts and fuller representation. Sedalia has an aggregate population of 7,000.

CALHOUN, MO.

This place is like Windsor, one of the old settlements. It possesses many natural advantages, among which may be enumerated plenty of wood, coal, water and good soil. Iron ore has been found in the vicinity in considerable quantities, but as yet not having been mined, nothing definite is known of its extent or richness. Coal is delivered in the town at 9 cents per bushel, and it is of an excellent quality ; wood—hickory and oak—at $2.00 per cord. There is plenty of the best hard wood in the vicinity, and a company has been formed and are now at work ,manufacturing it into spokes, hubs and poles for wagons and carriages. They have quite an extensive steam factory, and will do much to help the town. They have also an excellent hotel here, and the usual number of business houses for a prosperous town ; it is 29 miles from Sedalia, 72 miles from Fort Scott, and 217 from St. Louis.

LEWIS, MO.

A flag station in Henry county. There is no business done here. Distance from Sedalia, 32 miles ; from St. Louis, 221 miles. It is well located and promises well for the future.

CLINTON, MO.

The population, 2,500. This town was first laid out in 1836 as county-seat of Rives county. Henry county was laid out in 1838. The population, down to the war, was about 500. From 1865 to 1873 it grew to its present dimensions. 7,000 of the population are natives of the State. About 5,000 came from Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. Present population, 20,000. The farming interest of the county is largely on the increase. The county is an excellent corn and wheat county, and all other small grain. Excellent coal in vast quantities abounds all over the county, and is being mined quite successfully. Lead ore was recently discovered in the southeast part of the county. The Germans form a considerable part of the population. The county has excellent schools and churches, and Sabbath schools have a good footing. Wild land ranges from $2 to $25 per acre, and improved lands from $5 to $50.

LADUE, MO.

A flag station 7 miles west of Clinton, 46½ miles from Sedalia, and 235½ miles from St. Louis. There is an excellent coal mine here, but no business houses.

MONTROSE, MO.

This thriving place, though but a new town, laid out and built since the M. K. & T. R. R. was built, is now probably doing more business than any place of its size on the road. The country around it is very rich and is well settled, while new settlers are coming in every day. The land is rolling prairie. It contains four churches, steam mill, a good hotel and a large number of business houses. A good public school building will soon be put up.

Population about 900. Distance from Sedalia, 52½ miles; Fort Scott, 57½ miles; St. Louis, 241½ miles.

DEERFIELD, MO.

The last station in Missouri, as also the one next east of Ft. Scott, Kan., and 12 miles from it, and 9 miles from the last station, being far enough from each to become of some importance, as it doubtless will ere long. Its present population is about 150.

FORT SCOTT, KAN.

This enterprising town was first located as a United States Fort with the usual traders, trappers, hunters and Indians, who, with troops stationed here, formed the inhabitants from 1842 to 1860, when a town was organized, and for a year prospered but little, when the War Department found it again necessary to re-occupy the almost abandoned town and fort; and during the four years following it was an important military post, being a base of supplies for the Federal army, and hence the town grew in population as a war necessity until the close of the war, when an enterprising class of men began rapidly settling up the rich and productive country around it, which has steadily increased ever since, until it is now surrounded by a rich and prosperous agricultural people, who are each year increasing in numbers and wealth, and whose necessities have given a permanent growth to the town equaled by few towns in the Southwest, and which has become enhanced by the growth and necessities of smaller surrounding towns, whose trade centers here. The natural location is a good one, being on rising ground, surrounded by rolling prairies and fine belts of timber, with unlimited beds of coal; and in this latter, although mined but very little, exists a mine of wealth, as this coal is clear of sulphur, and is a good steam coal. It can be supplied at a very low figure, in large quantities, hence here is the permanent foundation as well as a large home consumption for many articles of manufacture, and foreign capital will do well to look in this direction for investments, as this town now has a population of 6,500, with a healthy increase, and is likely to be the commercial distributing center for Western Missouri, Southern Kansas and the Indian Territory, comprising an immense scope of country, now only partially settled, but rapidly filling up with honest and industrious people from the more densely populated States, all of which makes an increase of consumption; and hence money invested in manufacturing would be permanently remunerative, and is the only sure basis of creating and maintaining an increase of population and wealth in a town or city, and in this, Ft. Scott possesses advantages equaled by few towns anywhere. She has now some manufacturing enterprises of fair magnitude, each of whom are prospering, and whose names, nature of business and location can be seen below and in our advertising pages, to which all are referred.

MARMATON, KAN.

A flag station 7 miles south of Fort Scott; 117½ miles from Sedalia; 306½ miles from St. Louis. No houses here, only a side track for passing of trains.

HIATTVILLE, KAN.

Hiattville is a flag station situated twelve miles south-west of Fort Scott, in the midst of a beautiful rolling prairie. It is beautifully located on a high mound, and commands a splendid view of the surrounding country. It consists principally of a large assorted store, kept by E. B. Rall, and a grocery, kept by D. K. Anderson. There is also a hotel managed by an excellent landlord, namely, Wm. Dailey. The Railroad Company and the people are together building a switch here, so that it will, ere long, be quite an important place.

HEPLER, KAN.

Is located in Crawford county, on the M. K. & T. R. R., 20 miles south of Fort Scott, and 15 north of Osage Mission, near the head of Walnut and Pawnee creeks in the midst of a beautiful and productive country. The scenery around Hepler is picturesque and beautiful, the country abounding in high mounds, and is traversed by numerous streams, all of which are skirted by timber of an excellent quality.

WALNUT, KAN.

Is located on Walnut Creek, on the M. K. & T. R. R., 27 miles southwest of Fort Scott, in Crawford county. There is a very tidy depot building here, and a good location for a thriving town. Good timber and water in abundance, and an excellent farming country. Land is worth from $5 to $15 dollars per acre in the vicinity.

OSAGE MISSION, KAN.

This sterling town was located in 1867; is 35 miles south of Fort Scott, and 354 miles from St. Louis. Its location, although heretofore on Indian ground, now Southern Kansas, was a good selection, being on the east branch of the Neosho river, with Flat Rock Creek on the east, surrounded by fine timber on one side and rolling prairie on the other, renders it picturesque and attractive. The establishing of a Jesuit Missionary School, first inaugurated it in 1847, which still exists, greatly increased, enlarged and appreciated as a medium of education of the Osage and other Indian tribes, in which they have been largely successful.

This has now become an important shipping and trading town, and is, in brief, a railway headquarters, having a population of 2,000, among whom are the following live business men which read :

PARSONS, KANSAS.

In 1840 the site now occupied by Parsons was known as wild prairie of Southern Kansas, but the completion of the Northwestern division of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway to this point in June of that year, and that of the Sedalia division of the same Company in March of 1871, gave to this point a significance not usually found in new railroad termini; and this condition was not to remain unimproved, for this same Company immediately began their great trunk railroad line south through the Indian country, toward the "Lone Star" State, and it was then, that this town took on permanent commercial importance, and from that time to the present enjoyed a substantial increase, known to few towns in the great "Southwest." Owing its permanent population and wealth to the far-reaching enterprise and liberality of this Railway Company, the name of whose President it bears, than which a more worthy philanthropist is not to be found in the entire list of American or European Railway Managers, and who is equally seconded by that far-seeing, shrewd General Manager, R. S. Stevens; this town now numbering a population of 2,500 souls, was located with good judgment, being on a rich, rolling prairie, at the forks of Labette River; the country around is prairie, with occasional groves or belts of timber, with plenty of water for agricultural purposes and stock raising, both of which are conducted on a large scale by men of experience and means, who are receiving every month large accessions to their numbers, from the older States, whose necessities and wants have to be supplied by the merchant and manufacturer; of the former there are a good number for enterprising, liberal men; and of the latter a few, and to others for whom there is a fine opening for a profitable business; the names of all of which see below:

VINITA, INDIAN TER.,

Is a station on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, and the western terminus of the A. & P. R. R., and is the great Eldorado from which the tides of ceaseless wealth shall flow to enrich the Western world, and the 35th Parallel R. R., just 401 miles distant from St. Louis, with an enterprising population of 50 souls, among which are two store traders, the R. R. Agents, one tavern keeper, together with a few trappers, half-breeds and Indians, all of the latter industriously idle; the yearly increase of population will average 2 per cent.

No business here—two or three houses, population about 25. Distant from Parsons, 77 miles; Denison, 196 miles; St. Louis, 425 miles.

CHOUTEAU, INDIAN TER.,

Is a shipping point for the country around, but no business houses except a little Indian store with a capital of about $25. Distance from Parsons, 86 miles; Denison, 186 miles; St. Louis, 434 miles; will be a good town on the opening of the Territory to white settlement.

GIBSON, INDIAN TER.,

Is a station of more importance than the last, being surrounded with some timber, and is the shipping point for Fort Gibson and other Indian villas and lodges. It has a population of 500, with several good business men, the names of which we failed to get, but may give in the appendix.

MUS-KO-GEE, INDIAN TER.

Muskogee is a town of about 500 inhabitants, 117 miles south of Parsons, and 456 miles from St. Louis, and is the "base of supplies" for a large tract of country. A large part of Ft. Smith and Van Buren, Ark. freight and passenger trade coming this way. The products of the country are mostly cotton, hides and furs, quite large amounts being shipped daily. The soil is adapted to grow almost anything, and should the Territory be thrown open to white settlement this little town will be the centre of a thriving farming country. It might make a splendid stock country, but fear the lack of water will prevent that ; they have no wells, and have to depend on the rivers for their supply.

The M. K. & T. Railway have good repair shops and round house here, it being the end of Cherokee and Choctaw Divisions. The following are the business men of the town :

DENISON, TEXAS.

Denison, now only a year old, has a population of 2500, among whom are some of the most substantial merchants in any town on the route, whose energy is unceasing and integrity unquestioned. The natural location was a good selection, (yet it might have been as good immediately on the banks of Red River). The situation is some 3 miles from the south-side of the Red River in Texas, near the boundary line between Texas and the Indian Territory, on fine rising ground, with a magnificent view, rich deep soil with a red clay sub-soil, a soil remarkable for its certainty of yearly production, although being porous it retains moisture during the summer far beyond other sub-soils. The stores of this town are substantial structures, which show permanency and perfect confidence in the future importance of this town, and in fact, from present indications it bids fair to very soon rival Sherman, Waco and Dallas, and may become the largest town in Northern Texas. SHERMAN, TEXAS.

Sherman, the metropolis of Northern Texas, with a population of 4,500 inhabitants, is 14 miles south of the Red river, or northern Texas boundary, 10 miles from Denison, 441 miles from Sedalia, 630 miles from St. Louis, and 380 miles from Galveston. It is situated in and surrounded by a marvelously rich country, partially but well cultivated in a deep, rich soil of porous black sandy loam, of from 2 to 6 feet in depth, with a productive subsoil, which produces fine, yielding certain crops of cotton, tobacco, sugar cane, and good average crops of wheat, corn, rye, barley, oats, flax and grasses, which, during dry weather, are well watered by dews, which are heavy, productive and healthy. In addition to these immense yearly yields, fruits of every kind and of the finest quality, are produced here in abundance. This entire section of Northern Texas is well watered and has ample areas of wood and coal skirting the numerous streams. And to this latter fact is attributed the profitable breeding and herding of stock, especially cattle and sheep, of which extensive herds and flocks are owned by farmers and herders, many of the latter making it their sole occupation, from all of which, each are making money surely and quickly, and yet there is vast room. From the above industries, energetically and permanently pursued, immense quantities of stock, wool, hidlers pelts, bones, cotton and tobacco are continually shipped from here to St. Louis and Galveston, on which certain profits and quick returns are invariably received, as commission houses each vie with the others, for this extensive business; and from these producers comes a large mercantile want, to be supplied both to the local consuming trade, as also to the retail trade of an immense surrounding country, extending for hundred of miles in some directions, to which the business men of Sherman are only partially alive to, as the building up of a town within 10 miles of it, that promises soon to rival it, is evident proof, but this is owing to their old foggy ideas of conducting business, coming into competition with more industrious and liberal-minded business men, of which their neighbor is composed; yet, each has ample room to enlarge. VAN ALSTYNE, TEXAS.

Van Alstyne, has been laid off a short time, and the following exhibit of establishments started in so short a time, indicates clearly that it will be one of the most important towns on the Central road. Situated on the highest point of the line from Houston to Red River, and in the heart of the best farming country in the State, it offers unrivaled inducements to those wishing to go into business, or seeking healthy and beautiful homes for their families.

McKINNEY, TEXAS.

This is the county seat of Collins county — one of the richest agricultural counties in the State. The soil is of the black, waxy kind and produces corn, cotton, wheat, etc., in great abundance. Considerable quantities of cotton and hides are shipped from here to Galveston and St. Louis.

McKinney is one of the old towns of Texas, having been settled in 1847. It contains about 800 inhabitants. The surrounding country is well diversified — partly timber, partly prairie. Improved

BRYAN CANDY MANUFACTORY.

Candy made of the best sugar, no adulteration. We the undersigned, merchants of the city of Bryan, have tested the qualities of the candy manufactured by R. A. Brantley, formerly by W. M. Wheat, and pronounce it the best that we have ever bought or sold, as it gives entire satisfaction in both warm and damp weather, and sold as cheap as goods of similar grade are sold in Galveston or elsewhere.

RICHARDSON, TEXAS.

A way station south of Plano. It is an excellent place for a colony to locate, and the country is superior and very cheap, and not yet settled.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

Dallas is not one of the oldest towns in Texas, but had an existence before the Houston & Texas Central Railroad was built, but this last gave it commercial intercourse and prominence and cheap transportation, since which time it has nearly doubled in population, having now 7,500 people, among whom are some extensive jobbers and several large retail houses, that are doing an immense business, and are deserving of much credit for their enterprise. The Texas Pacific Railroad, now completed to this point, crosses the Texas Central here, and is rapidly building farther west, which fact adds vast importance to the town, and with as vast and rich an agricultural section as surrounds it, will make Dallas for all time in future the third if not the second city on Texas soil. Below will be found the name and business of her business and professional men.

GROESBEECK.

This town, like others on this road, has lost the greater portion of its population by the T. C. being extended, yet those who have remained here are of the right stripe—energetic and pushing—and are determined to make the town a place of some importance. Nature is with them in their endeavor, for the place possesses many good points, having a pleasant situation with an excellent country around that is fast filling up. The soil is excellent, and land can be bought for from $10 to $20 for improved, and from $5 to $10 for unimproved.

In addition to good soil and natural advantages offered to settlers, Groesbeeck presents some others, among which may be mentioned the Texas Central Institute, 9 miles from the town. This institution is a school for both sexes, and is said to be one of the best in Texas.

Cotton, wool and hides comprise the bulk of the shipments.

It is 170 miles from Houston, 220 miles from Galveston, and 171 miles from Red River City.

HAMMOND, TEXAS.

A station 6 miles from Bremond and eight miles from Calvert, a watering and wood station; is in the woods; soil rather thin, but good sub-soil of red clay, similar to that on Red River.

CALVERT, TEXAS.

Calvert is the present seat of government for Robertson county. It has a population of about 2000, and does good business in cotton, hides, and plantation supplies. The country surrounding it is well settled up with prosperous planters. Soil is good. There has not been very much immigration to this county. Indications of coal have been discovered on the Brazos river, three to five miles from the town, and two companies have been formed, of men in Galveston and New Orleans, who have every expectation of success, as the surface coal when set on fire burned very readily. Below will be found the names of her business men, which see:

HEARNE, TEXAS.

This is a town of some age and importance as an inland town, but it was not until accommodated by railroad transportation that it gained any considerable commercial prominence ; and the Houston & Texas Central has done more for this town than any other enterprise, although the International Railroad now building from northeast to southwest through it, will eventually do quite as much for the town, as it will open up a vast country heretofore completely isolated from commercial intercourse, a section of country only partly inhabited. These facilities, with the natural advantages of Hearne, will in time make it the fourth city in the "Lone Star" State, as it deserves to be. Below is to be seen the name and business of her active citizens. It has a population of 1,500, is 221 miles from Red River, 839 miles from St. Louis, and 120 miles from Houston :

DR. WHITTIER,
617 St. Charles Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. Whittier believes that when our people shall be better acquainted with their own physical bodies and observe proper hygienic rules, they will live longer, suffer less pain, and pay less for doctor's bills; as a guide to health, his book is worth twenty times its cost.

Everybody knows we are improving the breeds of horses, cattle, sheep, &c.; also, in horticulture, great advances are made in bettering the qualities of fruit. Is it not time that something was done, or thought about at any rate, for the improvement of the human species.

In Doctor Whittier's book, one article devoted to that subject, which can be read in an hour or two, is worth ten times the price of the book in every family in the land.

Purity of blood and perfect manhood, the lustrous eye, the genial countenance, elasticity of step and gentlemanly bearing is a passport into society. Read the work of Doctor Whittier and pass it round, it is a popular work on subjects of paramount importance, and should be read by all.

Eine deutsche Ausgabe, enthaltend die hauptsächlichsten Artikel des obigen Werkes, ist erschienen und wird gegen Empfang von 25 Cents verjandt.

PRESS NOTICES.

[From the Missouri Republican.]

If experience, permanency of location, or facilities for curing disease are matters of importance, invalids should consult Dr. Whittier, 617 St. Charles Street, whose practice is confined to special diseases. The Doctor has seen the city double four times, and his practice twenty times, in the last twenty years.

(Aus der „Westlichen Post“.)

Ein Arzt, dessen Geschäftsfähigkeit zuverlässig ist, ist ein Segen für das Publikum. Von Dr. Whittier, 617 St. Charles Str., kann man das mit Recht behaupten. Seine Praxis hat seit zwanzig Jahren in gleichem Maasse mit der Bevölkerung des Mississippi Thales zugenommen.

[From the St. Louis Evening Dispatch.]

The pioneer of Western specialists. Dr. Whittier, 617 St. Charles Street, whose practice has grown up with the city, and whose publications are an able exponent of all matters connected with his specialties, should be at the hands of all.

[From the St. Louis Evening Journal.]

Permanently Established.—Dr. Whittier has spent the best of his younger and later years among us. No word of ours is needed in his recommendation—his patients are to be found in every State. We consider it creditable to this center of business that one of our citizens should draw revenue from all parts of the country. He purchased his present business establishment in 1860.

Is true to its name; is 12 miles north of Houston, with some good timber and a few inhabitants; draws its supplies from Houston.

EUREKA, TEXAS.

A passing station, 5 miles from Houston, with good country around it, but has not as yet gained as much popularity for railroad accidents as "Eureka," in Missouri.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

Houston, the second city in the State in population and trade, ranks as first in manufactures, in public buildings, in enterprise and in wealth. Situated upon Buffalo Bayou, at the head of navigation, and centrally to the whole State, she always enjoyed a large trade and a large influence with the interior. Before the era of railroads, when the interior commerce was carried on by ox-wagons, this was the grand centre to which it all tended. From 1837 to 1857 the streets of Houston were always, during the busy season, thronged by these "prairie schooners," and out of this trade many fortunes were built.

In 1857 the railroads built the previous year began to change this feature. At the beginning of that year, there were twenty-five miles of the Central road completed and seven of the Houston Tap, connecting with the Harrisburg and Richmond road, then only completed to the Brazos timber. Still, short as were these roads, they extended over the worst part of the much dreaded Houston prairie, and enabled the wagoners to save a long and boggy pull to market. From that time to this the railroads have yearly grown, until now there is connected with Houston the following miles of railroad, viz :

Houston and Texas Central, (main line),.....	341 miles.
“ “ “ “ (Western branch)	165 “
“ “ “ “ (Waco branch).	45 “
Galveston, Houston and Henderson.....	50 “
Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio	84 “
Houston and Great Northern, (main line)	115 “
“ “ “ “ (Columbia Division)	50 “
Inter-National via Hearne, (not operated).....	146 “
Houston and New Orleans “	110 “
Total	1106 miles.

Each season adds a new tier of counties that are becoming tributary to the Texas coast. And it is the universal experience of merchants, that no trade is so satisfactory as that thus turned from other markets, none so easy to please with terms, prices, etc. The fact speaks volumes.

The manufacturers of Houston are as yet comparatively in their infancy. Leading among them are the Houston City Mills and Eureka Mills. The money invested in them amounts to over $300,000. They give employment to a large number of operatives, and support directly and indirectly over a thousand people. They thus illustrate the advantage of manufactures over trade as the basis of a thriving population. When to these we add the thousands upon thousands dependent upon the foundries, the machine shops, and other great industries for their support, we shall find that four-fifths of the population of Houston belong to this department of manufactures. Great as these are, there is abundant room for more, and almost every week finds new enterprises of this kind inaugurated.

But trade, for some time subsequent to the war overdone, and consequently languishing, has of late experienced a remarkable revival, and to-day there is no city in the South whose streets show more animation, whose counting houses more business satisfaction, than this. Her merchants command a correspondence almost co-extensive with the State. From the western counties of DeWitt, Gonzales, Refugio to the Northern counties of Grayson Collin, Denton, and Lamar, there is not a town or a cross road that has not some business at this centre. As the railroads from month to month open up new distances, this trade is bound to spread until it reaches every section of this vast commonwealth.

Houston has of late years shown great enterprise and good taste in her public buildings. She has the finest educational edifice, the largest and finest hotel, the best courthouse, and her Masonic Temple, is the finest building of any kind in Texas.

In the matter of enterprise and public spirit, Houston may safely challenge the State for an equal, or the whole country for a superior. Her very foundations were laid in enterprise that disdained all natural advantages, and delighted in bending nature to its will. By all the rules of experience, Houston should have been laid out where Harrisburg now stands. But the projectors of the city could more easily make navigation and build railroads than they could persuade the owners of land, by "nature designed for a city," to yield to their enterprise, and Houston, as Dr. Moore well said in 1837, was located "at the very crown of the head of navigation," and to this day it would be difficult for a good sized skiff to go a thousand yards above the turning point for the largest steamboats. She has not only made the narrow and tortuous bayou navigable, but, following the projects of the far-seeing men who founded the city, she has built railroads, till now their great iron arms bid fair in a year or two more to embrace the whole State in their grasp. It is a curious fact, that when the city of Houston was laid out in 1837, one of the streets was named Railroad street, the very street on which, near 20 years after, the first rails were laid, and on which the great Central still enters the city.

But enterprise such as this grows with what it feeds upon, and each new achievement but opens a field and creates an ambition, not to say a necessity, for still greater. The whole State now offers to pour its commerce into her lap, and the question is, what is to be done with it? A railroad and a bayou, with a fleet of steamers and barges now counted by the score, prove inadequate to the growing commerce, and a ship channel to the Gulf has become a necessity. The work is already under way, and with such success, so far, as to give early promise of great relief. Not only has the undertaking been proved feasible, but its advantages are already felt in the trade, and ere long they will have sea-going vessels loading and discharging in the very heart of the city. Nor will this enterprise stop here, but another railroad to the Island is to be an early necessity, and will not only certainly be built, but it will be built by Houston enterprise and Houston capital.

Houston is growing in population. In 1850, the census showed 2,390. In 1860, the population had grown to nearly 5,000; and in 1870, the enumeration showed between 9,000 and 10,000. To-day

All kinds of Job Work done at the lowest rates.

IT HAS COME, PREPARE IN TIME.

The constant rains of spring and succeeding burning sun are producing their legitimate fruits in the demoralization of the liver, blood and bowels, and superinducing a train of diseases that, if not at once controlled and dissipated, will tend to the production of a greatly increased mortuary report, and unnecessary addition to the population of our cemeteries. You can be cured of all affections of the liver, jaundice, dyspepsia, constipation, depression of spirits, effects of alcoholic stimulants upon the liver and kidneys, dropsy, chills and fever,—in fact, perfect health is insured, if Maguire's Condurango Liver and Blood Bitters is used. No alcohol, no piles.—St. Louis Globe.

there are fully 20,000 within her limits, and the annual increase is very nearly equal to the entire population of 1850. This growth is caused, not only by the ordinary business growth and ordinary increase of population, but by the extreme healthfulness of the climate. With this large population, the average mortuary list for the years 1870 and 1879 was less than four per week the year round, or one in 55 annually of the average population. The United States may safely be challenged to produce a parallel. This good health is the characteristic of this climate, to which the only exception is the yellow fever. The cholera has never prevailed here, nor any other fatal epidemic but the fever. This has visited, in all, nine times, viz: in 1839, 1847, 1853, 1854, 1855, 1858, 1859, 1864 and 1867, the latter year proving by far the most fatal ever before known. During the decade from 1850 to 1860 there were five epidemics. From 1860 to 1870 there were but two. It is to be hoped that the sanitary measures now adopted—notably, the establishment of a rigid quarantine, and the construction of deep underground sewers—will remove largely the causes for the introduction and spread of this fever, and that there may be no more of it. It is the only drawback.

Prosperous as are the cities of Galveston and Houston, however, enterprising as are their citizens, it is doubtful if their prospective greatness has yet dawned upon them. An empire is behind them to back them up, and a field for enterprise before them that broadens and widens in every aspect. They are both destined to become the abode of populations to be numbered by the hundreds of thousands, and to sway influences that shall reach from the Lakes to the Rocky Mountains.

This city should be the seat of government, in justice, for it will in a few years be second to none in the "Lone Star State." See names of her enterprising business men below:

HARRISBURG JUNCTION, TEXAS.

This is several miles from the town of the same name, has a few enterprising people, principally railroad employees, engaged in operating the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railroad, which branches off from here, running west, and is now in operation to Columbia, 84 miles from the Junction, 128 miles from Galveston. This road is being extended toward San Antonio as fast as possible.

The stations of Allen, Summit, Clear Creek, Dickenson, Highland, Virginia Point, Eagle Grove, and Poolville, the stations intervening between this point and Galveston, a distance of 44 miles, are very much alike in appearance and importance, there being no towns, as there is but little settlement of the country, it being level and flat, covered some seasons by overflow, hence no support for towns, as in fact their subsistence would be insecure and unprofitable, between two such cities as Houston and Galveston, neither over 25 miles off, we therefore come to the Gulf of Mexico, and across the Bayou to GALVESTON, TEXAS.

Galveston, the largest city and principal port of Texas, lies on Galveston Island, in North latitude $29^{\circ} 17'$, and $94^{\circ} 46'$ west longitude from Greenwich.

As a cotton exporting port, it stands third in the Annual Statement of 1871, of exports from the United States to foreign countries. The favor which the Texas staple is viewed in foreign markets has no doubt contributed, and will long continue to contribute, to the rapid growth of the city as a cotton port.

Previous to the civil war Galveston had begun to rank as a sugar exporting port. The results of the war having prostrated this industry in the coast counties of the State, and although it is now beginning to revive, the receipts of sugar and molasses have been so small, they are not tabulated in the current commercial tables of the port.

The wool trade of Galveston has developed since the civil war, and but recently passed into the hands of experts in grading and sorting. With the extension of the railroads, now being constructed to the western counties, this trade bids fair to increase.

GRAIN. The want of railroad transportation between tide water and the wheat growing region of Texas, has hitherto kept this staple out of foreign markets. This connection is now complete to Red River by the construction of the Central Texas Railroad, and as Galveston is by far the nearest accessible point on tide water, a development of trade in wheat may be looked for. The wheat of Texas ripens well, is very heavy, and may be expected to hold a high rank in other markets when exported from a Texan port, as Texas cotton now does under like circumstances.

As a Coffee market Galveston has developed notably since the war. Direct importation has been established by several firms, and it now has the reputation of being one of the cheapest coffee markets in the United States. A recent Rio Janerio circular gives the following statement of exports of coffee to Galveston: 1870, 11,702 bags; 1871, 22,410 bags.

It is said the import of this article, during the present year, will exceed 40,000 bags.

The renewed activity in the construction of railroads in Texas bears the promise of a continued growth of trade to Galveston. For years the contested titles to the flats forming the harbor front, and to the Galveston & Houston Railroad, which connects it with the railroad sytem of the State, at Houston, exercised a depressive and injurious power over the local spirit of enterprise. These have now been finally settled, and a renewed feeling in favor of public improvements animates the inhabitants. The railway connections of Galveston on the first of January, 1872, were the following: By G. H. & H. R. R. to Houston, 50 miles; From Harrisburg to Columbus, by Galveston & San Antonio R. R., 129 miles.

The Galveston & San Antonio Railroad has been voted subsidies by both of the cities named, and it is said will be rapidly extended westward.

Prominent among projected roads from Galveston are the Galveston and Eastern Texas, to Henderson and Red river; and the Galveston and Denver Road, to Denver, Colorado Territory.

The facilities for water transportation from Galveston are naturally good, and with moderate enterprise and expenditure can be largely extended. Galveston Bay is a broad sheet of water, penetrating about thirty miles into the interior, and expanding laterally along the coast to nearly the same extent in each direction. Besides the small affluents of Galveston, Harris and Chambers counties, it receives Buffalo Bayou, navigable to Houston, and Trinity river, navigable to Lockbridge's Landing, 668 miles.

West Bay is connected by canal with the Brazos river, and it is proposed to extend this work 21 miles further, which will open inland navigation from Texas, through Matagorda Bay, to the salt deposits of the Laguna Madre, with a possible extension through this to Brownsville and Matamoras on the Rio Grande.

East Bay receives East Bayou, which it is proposed to connect by canal 20 miles long with Taylor's Bayou, an affluent of Sabine Bay. This connection would open water transportation from Galveston to the Neches river, navigable 260 miles; the Angelina river, navigable 450 miles; and the Sabine river, navigable 800 miles at favorable seasons. When this canal is opened, Galveston will become one of the largest markets in the South.

The South Channel of Galveston Bay, running between the island and Pelican Spit and Shoal, which measurably protect shipping, forms the harbor of Galveston. In this channel and the inner roads thirty feet of water are found. On the outer bar, twelve feet is the greatest draft of water that can be carried over safely. The larger vessels which visit the port lie in the outer roads, where safe anchorage and good holding ground exist in six fathoms of water.

Between the inner roads and the harbor, a shallow bar had formed in recent years. This has been removed by a breakwater, (constructed by the city at a cost of nearly $100,000) extending about 600 yards from the point of the island. This work, by confining and giving direction to the current, has so swept the channel, that ships which cross the outer bar can proceed at once to the wharves. It was the original design to extend this breakwater about 600 yards farther. Should this be accomplished, it is believed that not only will the water on the outer bar be still further deepened, but that by the consequent union of the South Channel current with that flowing through Bolivar Channel, an important effect upon the Cylinder Channel over the outer bar will be produced.

The outer bar is evidently formed through the deflection and deadening of the outflow from Galveston Bay, by the prevailing current setting in a S. W. direction along the coast. The Cylinder Channel is the continuation proper of the Bolivar Channel from the bay, but the current is deflected from it. It is noticed that the tide at the flood sets into the bay through this channel, but at the ebb flows out over the main bar. If this outflow could be to any extent directed into the Cylinder Channel, it is thought it would be an important effect in deepening the channel which now has ten feet of water. This is a work which, from its magnitude and wide influence upon the general interests of the country, should be undertaken by the Federal government. Efforts are now being made to this end, and it is to be hoped they will awaken the attention this important subject merits.

The present inland navigation is limited to two lines of steamers to Houston, the most important of which is the Houston Direct Navigation Company; several steamers running on Trinity river, one through the canal to the Brazos, and numbers of bay craft which supply the city with wood, cedar, bricks, charcoal, oysters and vegetables from the adjacent counties.

From the United States census returns, we take the following exhibit of the population of the city in the last three decades :

1860.....	7,307
1870.....	13,818
In 1873.....	25,000

Unlike most of the seaport cities of the country, the rise of Galveston has followed, instead of preceding, that of the interior settlements, growing out of their needs for communication with the ocean. The island was doubtless visited by the survivors of De Soto's ill-fated expedition, in the retreat from the Mississippi to Mexico (1543), but the first historical mention of it is by La Salle in 1686.

The city was laid out with a liberal and wise provision for the future. Broad streets running from the Gulf to the bay, intersected at right angles by wide avenues, insure a constant circulation of the sea-breeze, and make it, both in summer and winter, a delightful place of residence. The orange, the citron, and the lemon thrive in its gardens throughout the year, while in summer the refreshing breezes from the Gulf mitigate the heats which belong to its far southern latitude.

A great hindrance to the growth of Galveston is the want of an abundant water supply. Rain caught in cisterns is the source of all the fresh water used in the city. At no time does this afford the requisite supply for the Fire Department, or for steam engines and other mechanical purposes; while in season of drouth a portion of the inhabitants experience great privations from the want of water. A movement is now on foot to supply the city by means of public water works.

Situated as Galveston is geographically and coast-wise, she has a position naturally second to none, and far in advance of Mobile and

New Orleans, as to harbor facilities for entering and departing of heavy craft, drawing ocean depth of water, and these natural advantages improved, with one-fourth the investment, would afford a much larger harbor than either of the above named cities, for the shipping of all nations, and to her importing trade must Galveston look for her permanent growth and future greatness, and she has citizens that, had they the means, would soon accomplish what they will eventually have to depend on the State or General Government to do.

OGDEN HOUSE,

Cor. Franklin and Washington Streets,

CHICAGO, ILLS.

TODD & SNOW,

PROPRIETORS.

This new and elegantly furnished house is admirably located, being but two squares from Board of Trade, and Court House, and equally convenient to Post Office, Theatres, Public Halls, etc., and is surrounded by many of the largest jobbing houses in the city; is complete in its appointments, containing all the accommodations of modern hotels. The proprietors are gentlemen of experience, enterprise and liberality, who know the wants of practical business men, and to encourage the patronage of such, have put their rates down to and yet furnish accommodations and set a table equal to those who charge $4.00 per day.

Merchants should stop at the Ogden House.

ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, now a city of 425,000 citizens, is naturally in the right place, being on the great Mississippi river, just below the mouth and junction of the great Missouri river, and within reasonable distance of the mouth of the great Ohio river,—the three greatest rivers on the North American continent,—thus receiving the benefit of thousands of miles of river transportation, as well as by rail, over seventeen trunk lines of railroad, and several others whose entire business passes over these main lines, thus reaching by rail every conceivable point of the compass, and each of these are rapidly extending and adding branch roads, covering the entire Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio valleys and the great “Southwest,”—a larger scope of productive country than any other city has ever had access to, or controlled, numbering hundreds of towns and villages, all which can more cheaply draw their supplies from St. Louis than any other point.

Notwithstanding all that nature and the foresight and industry of ancestry have done for this city, it is not yet alive to its advantages ; seclusion and bigotry have here existed for a quarter of a century, and still controls full half of her citizens, among whom are many good, honest old fogies, that would do quite as much for themselves, their posterity and the public, by passing to the “Happy Hunting Grounds,” and leaving untrammelled the industry and enterprise possessed by those left remaining. The names of a few of those last named, are given in the following list and in our advertising pages, the exact number of page being found by referring to the “Index” in front of book :

MISSOURI, KANSAS & TEXAS
RAILWAY COMPANY

Offer for Sale

1,300,000 ACRES,

OF THE
BEST LAND IN KANSAS.

The lands are situated mainly within twenty miles on each side of the road, extending one hundred and eighty miles along the the richest, finest and most inviting valley for settlement in the West. The lands are admirably adapted to fruit and vine culture, stock raising, and dairy business. They consist of rich bottoms, level, undulating and rolling prairie, usually convenient to wood and stone, spring, creek or river water. Situated between the parallels of 37 and 39 degrees north latitude, the temperature is generally mild and equable, requiring little hay for wintering of stock.

Interspersed among cultivated tracts, and lying in large bodies together, they present inducements to families, neighborhood settlements, and large colonies, possessed by no other lands in the State. While the lands of similar corporations have been culled by the two hundred thousand settlers of the last two years, these have been rigidly reserved intact, and are now open to the actual hard-working settler—the bone and sinew of the nation.

SOIL.

Most of the State rests upon a clay sub-soil, with a black alluvial mould above. Along the streams and rivers this mould is from three to six feet deep, and on the uplands or prairies, from one to three feet. Its richness a generation cannot exhaust.

PRICES OF LAND.

Our lands vary in price, usually from $2 to $10 per acre, are sold upon a credit of ten (10) years' time, and on more favorable terms than those of any other company in the State. It is our purpose to prevent as far as possible any speculation in the lands of this Company, and to encourage sales to ACTUAL SETTLERS alone.

TERMS OF SALE.

One-tenth down at the time of the purchase. No payment the second year, except the interest. One-tenth every year after until completion of payments, with annual interest at the rate of ten per cent. This is the usual interest of the State. Any one wishing to save the interest can have the privilege of paying up at any time.
